This course investigates the complex intersections of art, politics, and mass media from the early 20th century to the present. Topics include the rise of social documentary photography, the deployment of propaganda in wartime posters and newsreels, and the spectacle of mass rallies such as Leni Riefenstahl's Triumph of the Will. We will also consider the politics of performance and socially engaged art, from the Situationists and ACT UP to Occupy Wall Street and contemporary digital activism. Throughout the seminar, we will analyze how visual culture—from photography and film to protest posters, installations, and memes—both sustains and resists systems of power. Students will engage primary sources and critical scholarship to produce research or creative projects that interrogate the political life of images in the age of mass media.

A review of successful and unsuccessful insurgencies and counterinsurgencies in history. We will examine the ways of war of several insurgent movements, and the operational practices and procedures of states and occupation forces to suppress them. We will use case studies to determine how 'national styles' evolve; how operations and techniques are influenced by transnational trends; and how insurgencies and counterinsurgencies succeed or fail. You will develop a theory about how a particular 'strategic culture' or 'national style' influences the approach to operations, how the approach affects the conduct and outcome of the operation, and whether changed approaches may have contributed to different outcomes. Finally, you will study several case studies to develop a theory of an "American Way of Counterinsurgency" and apply your theory to our 21st Century experience.

If you have enjoyed a sweet-and-savory BBQ sandwich at the world-famous Buc-ee's in Sevierville, TN lately, you have participated in Indigenous history. You see, the Eastern Band of the Cherokee Indians owns the land Buc-ee's occupies, funding their community infrastructure and cultural revitalization projects. So how did we get from the realities of Indigenous peoples of the Southeast to traditional narratives of "disappearing Indians" and "rugged frontiersmen"? In this class, we will explore the Native South, the real Native South. We will visit smoky caves and fragrant strawberry fields high in the Appalachian Mountains. We will talk of powerful princesses and murderous Spaniards. Of warrior women, mothers, and Latin-speaking socialists in East Tennessee. Of French wonders and Indigenous explorers. Of timeless rituals and sustainable agriculture. We will discuss removal and pain, justice and triumph. All to end up with a new appreciation for our shared land and history with Native peoples who live alongside us today.

John Shelton Reed asserted that "Appalachia has always served as the South's 'South.'" He was playing off the deeply rooted notion of southern exceptionalism while also noting that a great popular impression remained that Southern Appalachia was somehow not southern. To many observers, the relative lack of enslaved people, the divided loyalties during secession, and the guerrilla warfare that ravaged communities set the southern mountains apart from the Confederate South. But Southern Appalachia was incredibly important to the Civil War and Reconstruction and, perhaps equally significant, the Civil War and Reconstruction were important to the shaping of Appalachia.
