TEACHING EXPERIENCE

East Tennessee State University, Johnson City, TN

Online Instructor of CDST 1800-901 and CDST 1800-902 Library Research Skills Course

(January, 2017- Current)

Teaches CDST 1800-901 and CDST 1800-902, two online information literacy courses designed to develop the ability to find, use, and critically evaluate credible sources of information, while learning the citation procedures for MLA, 9th edition. CDST 1800-901 is a general information literacy course, while CDST 1800-902 is health-focused information literacy course, which ceased being offered Fall 2021.

The Library Ambassador Program (August, 2017 - Current)

Teaches group of 20-30 peer-mentors in weekly two-hour classes that meet throughout both fall and spring semesters and oversees the deployment of 30-40 ambassadors in service locations around campus. The Library Ambassador Program is a peer-mentoring approach to research help for undergraduates. Every fall the Sherrod Library hires 25-30 ambassadors into the program and trains them in information literacy and research skills for two semesters. Once training is complete, ambassadors are deployed across campus to help undergraduates with their research.

Instruction Librarian, Student Engagement & Instruction Coordinator (January 2020-Current)

Designs and teaches "one-shot" instruction sessions for various courses offered at ETSU at the request of the course professor. Designs qualitative and formative assessment of library instruction. Coordinates the library's instruction program, overseeing the scheduling of reference and instruction librarians to meet instruction requests.

College of the Albemarle, Elizabeth City, NCPart-Time Online Instructor of English Composition (January, 2012-May, 2016)

Taught English 111 and 112, online exposition courses designed to develop the ability to produce clear expository prose and to develop critical thinking skills and research methods. Taught English 113 and 114, research-based courses that expand the concepts developed in English 111 by focusing on writing that involves literature-based and science-based research and documentation.

Northeast State Technical Community College, Blountville, TNPart-Time Instructor of English Composition (August-December, 2003)

Taught English 1010 and 1020, composition courses designed to develop expository writing skills, literary interpretation, critical thinking and argumentation skills, research techniques and MLA documentation.

University of Southern Mississippi, Hattiesburg, MSTeaching Assistant (August, 2002-May, 2003)

Taught English 099, 101 and 102, composition courses designed to introduce reflective, persuasive, and interpretive essay writing while focusing on critical thinking and research methods. English 102 culminated in a portfolio review. English 099 was a developmental English course designed to prepare students for English 101 and 102 courses.

Writing Center Tutor, University of Southern Mississippi (August, 2001-August 2002)

Provided one-on-one assistance and advice on undergraduate and graduate student writing from across the curriculum; assisted students in the editing and revision of a wide range of projects from research papers to dissertations.
