

Research activities to resume June 1

Effective June 1, research activities will resume on the ETSU campus. This announcement applies specifically to our funded researchers and graduate students in those labs. In addition, undergraduate students who are supported by NIH R15 grants or NSF grants should also return to their respective labs at this time. Deans and department chairs are in the process of communicating with research faculty and students regarding the conditions of re-engagement of research activities in laboratories. These conditions include the use of masks, limitations on the number of persons working in a lab space, and social distancing practices. In addition, information is being shared with faculty and students regarding the re-engagement of research activities that involve human subjects. Dr. Bill Duncan, Vice Provost for Research and Sponsored Programs Administration, is overseeing the process of research activities returning to campus and is making this information available on the ORSPA website. Those with questions should consult Dr. Duncan or the respective dean or department chair.

At this time, administrative and clerical staff are not required to return to the laboratory when research resumes. These employees will follow the guidelines and recommendations that the university prescribes for employees by classification. More specific information about administrative and clerical staff returning to campus will be included in the recommendations from the Future Operations Workgroup. The recommendations will be shared with senior leadership team. Decisions regarding how and when other faculty, staff, and students may safely return to campus will be made as soon as possible. Until that time, employees should continue to work remotely.

Information Security Awareness Training

You may be aware that we recently ran a simulated phishing security test to determine what our vulnerability would be if a real phishing attack were to happen to our employees. Our percentage of users who fell for this attack was 17.3%. The percentage of users who fall for a phishing attack within institutions of higher education that have not implemented a comprehensive information security awareness program is approximately 31.7%. Although we are doing a better than our peers, we still have a lot of learning ahead of us when it comes to phishing and scam avoidance.

Phishing is the process of trying to gain access to sensitive information such as usernames, passwords, and other personal identifiers by pretending to be a credible entity. Phishing is usually done by sending out bulk emails to try to avoid spam filters. Cybercrime is getting more serious by the month. Hackers are getting smarter about tricking people into clicking on fraudulent links or opening malicious attachments in emails. It can happen to you personally on your own computer and email as well.

Because of this, ETSU has decided that it is very important that everyone gets comprehensive security awareness training. We need to defend our University against cybercrime, and security is everyone's responsibility. You are the last line of defense in keeping our organization safe. ETSU's information security awareness training policy is available within the University's main policy website.

We will be sending out an email to invite you to take this training. In addition to security training, we will also send out simulated phishing tests regularly so you can practice the skills you will learn as part of your training. Be on the lookout for these in your inbox.
