The body abounds in the global history of art in literal and metaphoric forms. Art historians, critics, and artists make, and speak of, bodies of work and iconographic corpuses composed of discrete objects that represent bodies and/or are analyzed with references to anatomical analogies. In this graduate seminar, students will interrogate the conceptual category of the body, drawing upon a wide, cross-disciplinary range of theoretical literature and focused case studies that reveal the multiplicity of ways that the body has been conceived and visualized around the world. In addition to participation in discussions and presentations, students will develop an original work of art and an accompanying expository essay that, together, respond to the question, "What is a body?" These works and excerpts from students' essays will be curated as a group exhibition in the Panoramic Gallery of the William King Museum of Art (Abingdon, VA) in summer 2023.

BIOL 1010-900 is an ONLINE course offered through the ETSU Biological Sciences Department and requires a permit to register. Send permit requests along with your E# and course CRN to connere@etsu.edu.  Students will not be required to meet on campus or online at scheduled times. A distance learning laboratory kit is required, and it will be provided by your instructor at no extra charge. For minimum system computer requirements and additional information, please go here: https://www.etsu.edu/onlinehelp/student_help/tech_resources.php (you will need to copy/paste the link). Please be advised you will be responsible for watching/listening to lectures on D2L and completing assignments and assessments by the posted deadlines for each. You will be required to submit electronic photos of yourself performing the home-based lab exercises in order to receive full credit. Other requirements will be addressed by the instructor. The lab portion is included in this course. Please do not register for a separate BIOL 1011 co-requisite. Students wishing to attend a campus-based classroom section must enroll in a different section of BIOL 1010.*

A chronological review of the history of the United States Army, by studying the people, events, and trends that affected the development and employment of the Army from its colonial beginnings thru the present. The focus of the course is on developing a concept and understanding of an "American Way of War" by studying and understanding the heritage and operational and institutional development of the US Army. Students will combine directed readings, individual research and writing, and classroom instruction to analyze the doctrine, organizations, technologies, training, and leader development foundations of events and trends throughout the history of the US Army within the context of a unique American national character.

This course introduces students to the range of work by bell hooks, a Black feminist scholar and activist. As a class, we will consider her writings on race, class, gender, sexuality, pedagogy, art, mass media, and more. Following hooks' belief in education as the practice of freedom, students will [something about contribute to course/assessment design? undertake independent research?] and participate in community focused reading groups throughout the semester.

This is a synchronous on-campus and distance learning class. The lecture portion of section -995 is a live video streaming section made available to students via Instructional Technology. Students may log in to the live class using a computer at the same time the -001 section is scheduled. Recordings of each class lecture session will be available via the course D2L page. There is a lab associated with this class. The synchronous distance section students may have to come to campus at the regularly scheduled time for exams and to perform lab assignments unless they identify and get approval for an affiliate to proctor the exams and lab assignments off-campus. Other requirements will be addressed by the professor. Contact the course instructor for questions or to make special arrangements.

This course introduces students to the range of work by bell hooks, a Black feminist scholar and activist. As a class, we will consider her writings on race, class, gender, sexuality, pedagogy, art, mass media, and more. Following hooks' belief in education as the practice of freedom, students will have opportunities to contribute to course design, undertake independent research, and participate in community focused reading groups throughout the semester.
