This course investigates the complex intersections of art, politics, and mass media from the early 20th century to the present. Topics include the rise of social documentary photography, the deployment of propaganda in wartime posters and newsreels, and the spectacle of mass rallies such as Leni Riefenstahl's Triumph of the Will. We will also consider the politics of performance and socially engaged art, from the Situationists and ACT UP to Occupy Wall Street and contemporary digital activism. Throughout the seminar, we will analyze how visual culture—from photography and film to protest posters, installations, and memes—both sustains and resists systems of power. Students will engage primary sources and critical scholarship to produce research or creative projects that interrogate the political life of images in the age of mass media.

A chronological review of the history of the United States Army, by studying the people, events, and trends that affected the development and employment of the Army from its colonial beginnings thru the present. The focus of the course is on developing a concept and understanding of an "American Way of War" by studying and understanding the heritage and operational and institutional development of the US Army. Students will combine directed readings, individual research and writing, and classroom instruction to analyze the doctrine, organizations, technologies, training, and leader development foundations of events and trends throughout the history of the US Army within the context of a unique American national character.

A review of successful and unsuccessful insurgencies and counterinsurgencies in history. We will examine the ways of war of several insurgent movements, and the operational practices and procedures of states and occupation forces to suppress them. We will use case studies to determine how 'national styles' evolve; how operations and techniques are influenced by transnational trends; and how insurgencies and counterinsurgencies succeed or fail. You will develop a theory about how a particular 'strategic culture' or 'national style' influences the approach to operations, how the approach affects the conduct and outcome of the operation, and whether changed approaches may have contributed to different outcomes. Finally, you will study several case studies to develop a theory of an "American Way of Counterinsurgency" and apply your theory to our 21st Century experience.

This course delves into the fascinating world of protein aggregation, exploring how proteins organize into complex structures that are ubiquitous in nature and drive essential biological processes. Students will learn about the fundamental principles governing protein folding and self-assembly, its role in cellular functions, and its implications diseases. The course will also cover the exciting field of protein engineering, where scientists are harnessing the power of protein self-assembly to develop innovative materials and therapies. Required Reading(s): 1) David Teplow, Bahareh Dabirmanesh, Vladimir Uversky, The Hidden World of Protein Aggregation, 1st Edition, Volume 206 - May 2024, 2) Andrzej Stanisław Cieplak.Protein Aggregation - Methods and Protocols, 1st Edition, XVI, 681 https://doi.org/10.1007/978-1-0716-2597-2
